easily, bypassing the provider state, which can be intercepted with middleware. Postman offers pre-request scripts where a request could be made to set up the data, but it wouldn’t have the same flexibility as the native provider code.