A consumer contract test, illustrated in figure 1.5, can be explained on a high level in a few steps:

1. The frontend engineer, or the consumer in general, defines the interaction with a mock provider. An interaction is the request and response that will be registered to the mock provider. The request describes what the consumer will send to the provider, while the response describes what the provider needs to return.
