

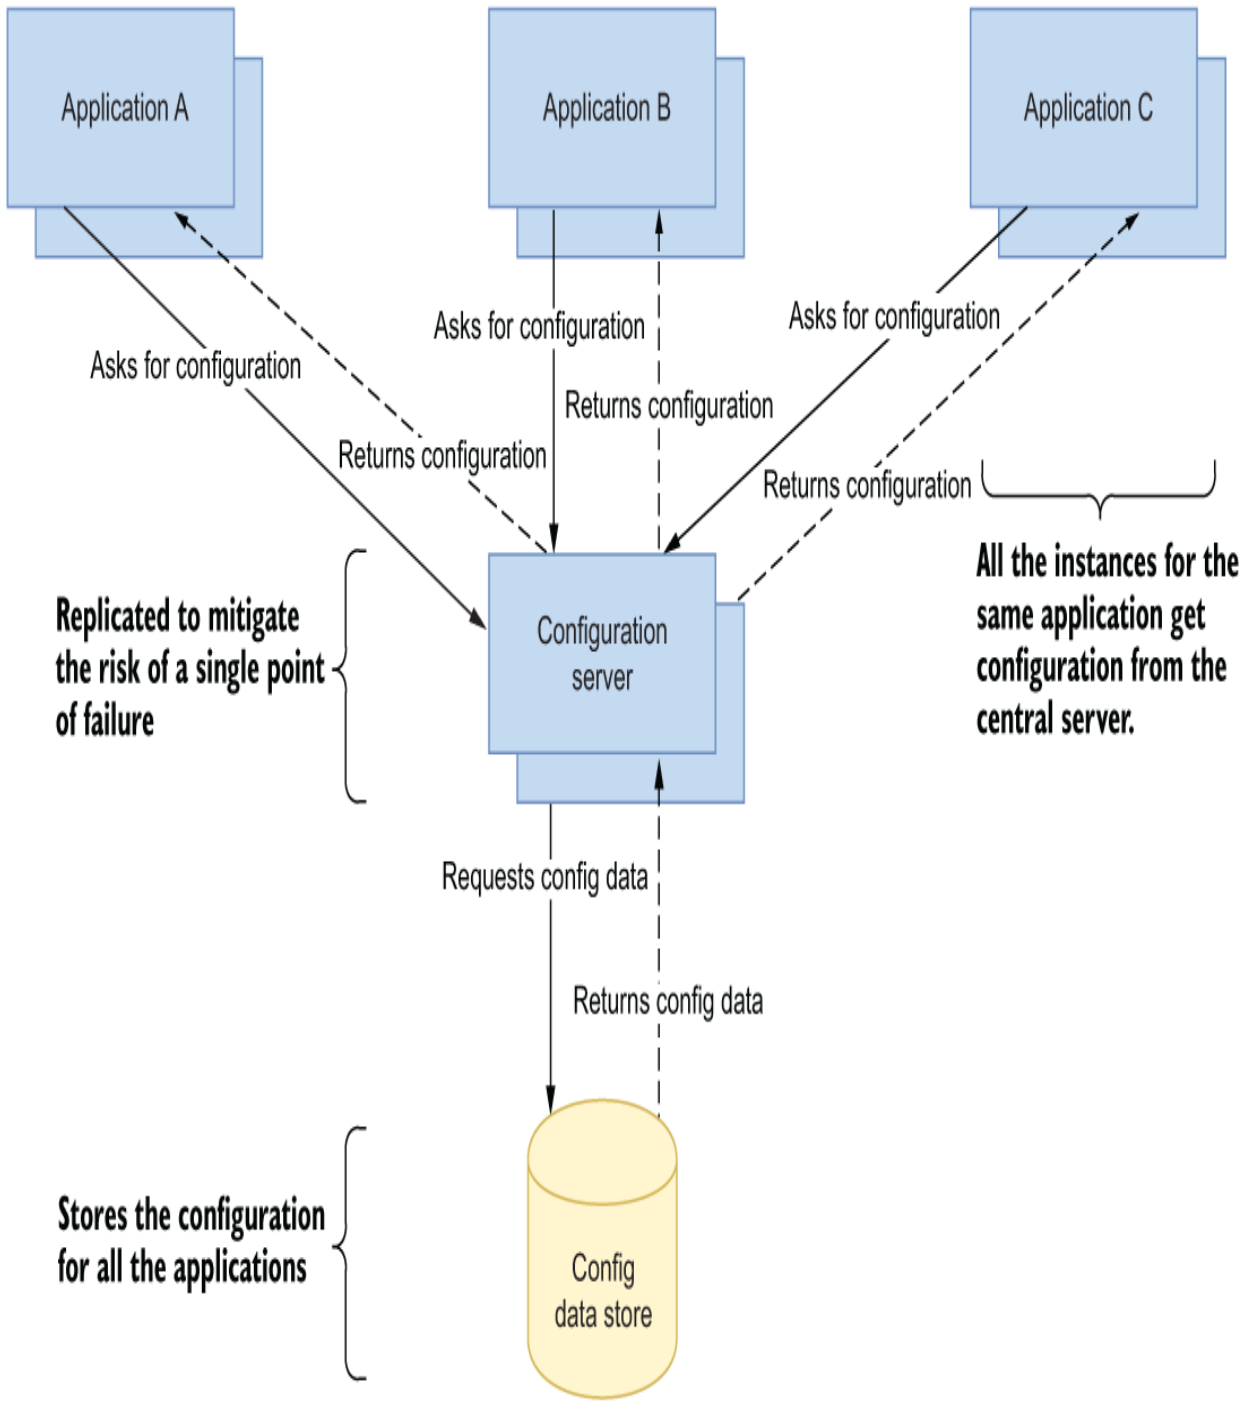

Figure 4.7 A centralized configuration server manages external properties for many applications across all environments.

It’s clear from figure 4.7 that the configuration server becomes a backing service for all the applications, which means it’s at risk of being a single