- The more open standards like OpenTelemetry a tool supports, the more likely you are not locked in and are able to move on to another tool if it doesn't fit your needs anymore.
- Frontends are typically where correlation happens; that is, you would expect that the UI supports operations and visualizations to easily switch from one telemetry signal type to another.