dataset (the domain dataset), created for satisfying user needs.

- The data product owner, with the data product development team, is responsible for creating and maintaining the data product, optimizing its usefulness for users.
- Data product data is accessible through one or more ports.
- A data product exposes information interfaces to make it findable and understandable outside the context of its creation.
- A rich metadata description enables data discovery and reusability.
- FAIR principles can be a well-defined base for standardizing data product descriptions.
