- Enabling team
- Governance team
- Platform team

The latter two are optional and will depend heavily on your setup. To learn more about these topics, read chapters 6 and 7, respectively. In our experience, however, the quality of the enabling team is critical to a data mesh implementation success. You can form your enabling team as a group responsible for the change management, a community of practice, or a governance team. We will expand on their roles and responsibilities in section 2.3.3.

With an initial structure in place, you can start your development cycle. Figure 2.10 focuses on elements of the development cycle.

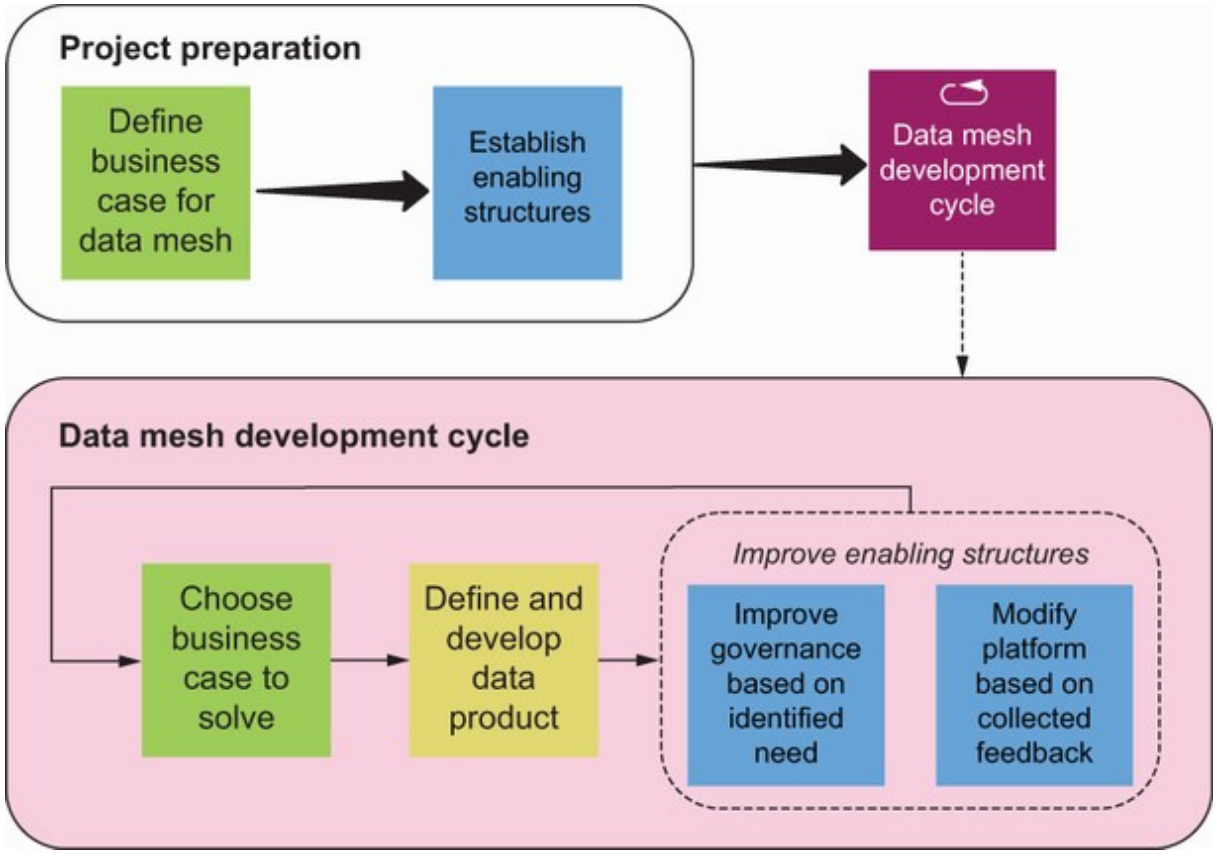

Figure 2.10 Data mesh development elements—data mesh development cycle details